Nixon Bars Concessions Until Hanoi 'Negotiates'

U.S. Steps Up Raids, Adds To Air Power

SAIGON, Feb. 10 (AP).-The United States increased its strikes across South Vietnam today to 84—compared to 10 most days to counter a sharp increase in action by the Communists.

Meanwhile, the United States was marshalling the biggest da of its planes in a year, involving reinforcements either here or en route of up to nearly 200 planes. They were intended possibly as a show of strength and warning to North Vietnam that the United States would retaliate hard in the event of an all-out Hanoi offensive.

Sources said the sudden canceling of leaves, the recall of two Seventh Fleet carriers and the doubling of the B-52 heavy bomber force in the western Pacific raised the strong possibility that the United States planned intensive retaliatory strikes on North Vietnam should the Communists mount a largescale offensive.

The Nixon administration is anxious to sustain the election-year pace of U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam. But it is equally determined not to let North Vietnam embarrass President Nixon while he is in China, in another two weeks, by humiliating South Vietnamese forces, who have taken over combat duties under the Vietnamization program.

Attack on Supply Routes For the moment, however, U.S. planes were pressed into action against North Vietnamese supply and storage depots along the Ho bodis and in South Vietnam. The U.S. Command reported that Air Force and Navy fighterbombers flew 84 strikes in South Vietnam, 80 of them in central coastal Binh Dinh Province and the Central Righlands provinces of Piel Kn and Kon Tun.

The U.S. Command said the 84 strikes were the most for Amer-ican tactical fighter-bombers in South Vietnam in one day since last Aug. 15, when more than 100 raids were flown to counter a North Vietnamese drive in the northernmost quarter of South Vietnam below the DMZ.

For the past four months, U.S. planes have been averaging less than 10 strikes a day in South Vietnam, concentrating instead on the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos. The Saigon command reported that the South Vietnamese Air Force added another 85 strikes. In addition, three sircraft car-riers launched scores of planes over Laos and reconnaissance jets over North Vietnam to pinpoint supply buildups. The Saigon command reported 41 Communist attacks during the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today, most of them near Da Nang and in Binh Dinh Province. Official communiqués from the Saigon command and filed re-ports listed at least 60 South Vietnamese killed and 161 wounded. The Saigon command claimed 204 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops were killed.

U.S., Saigon Put Off Talks Over Paris Anti-War Rally

By Jonathan C. Randal PARIS, Feb. 10 (WP) .- The United States and South Vietnam today in effect unilaterally adjourned the Paris peace talks indefinitely in a peppery protest against a three-day leftist-backed anti-war rally Versailles.
Although the United States

formally protested last month to France in disappointed hopes of having the rally ban-ned, the allied decision at the 144th session of the stalled talks came as a surprise.

Despite United States and South Vietnamese denials, observers believed the move was designed to postpone holding another session of the stalemated formal peace conference until after President Nixon completes his Feb. 21-28 visit to Peking. Similar anti-war meetings in Paris and elsewhere in France in the past have never provoked any overt allied protests to the French government. Indeed the allied attempts to have the Versailles meeting banned have suc-ceeded only in focusing attention on an event which otherwise very likely would have been largely ignored.

U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter told the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese negotiators "our side does not wish to agree to a meeting and does not agree to a meeting next week." He added that, "We will notify you when we have determined how soon another meeting will be desir-

Thieu Affirms Rift With U.S. Over Rogers' 'Flexible' Term

SAIGON, Feb. 10 (AP).—President Nguyen Van Thieu confirmed today a split between his government and the United States over the latest allied peace plan, attributing the differences to statements made by Secretary of State William P. Rogers. He said he had asked for official clarifications of Mr. Rogers's statement last Thursday that the United States remained "flexible" on details of a political settlement, and added:

"If he did say it, it is a viola-

Deputy press secretary Gerald R. Warren, questioned about Mr. Thicu's comments differing with the United States, said he had not seen the full text of Mr. Thieu's statement.

But Mr. Warren praised Mr. Thieu's offer to step down a month before a new election as a "personal decision of unparelleled generosity and patriotism."

He said, "There are some who Would see advantages in driving a wedge between our government and the government of South Vietnam." He would not say who was trying to drive such a wedge, but he added:

U.S. Reportedly Shifts B-52s. And 3d Carrier to War Zone

SAIGON, Feb. 10 (Reuters).— The United States has started a sudden and massive build-up of its air power in the face of a predicted Communist offensive in South Vietnam. Altering a three-year policy of gradual withdrawal, the Americans are reported to be almost doubling their force of B-52 bombers available for Indochina and have sent the aircraft car-rier Constellation steaming into the Gulf of Tonkin.

It joined the carriers Coral Sea and Hancock on "Yankee Station" off the Demilitarized Zone between the two Vietnams-the first regular three-carrier operation there for at least a year. According to unconfirmed reports in the United States, a fourth carrier, the Kitty Hawk, is preparing to sail for Vietnamese waters from San Diego. An Air Force spokesman de-clined to comment on reports from sources at Strategic Air Command headquarters in Omaha that 12 B-52s were transferred this week to Thailand from the Pacific base on Guam and that another 30 of the giant bombers were on their way to Guam from the United States, If true, the B-52 transfers would almost double the force available, bringing it to 80.

Waldheim Sees Nixon Trips Adding to Growth of Détente

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Feb. 10 (AP).—UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim expressed hope today that President Nixon's coming visits to China and the Soviet Union would contribute to a relaxation of tensions in the world.

The 53-year-old Austrian, at his first full news conference here since taking over the top UN job Jan 1, also advocated somitting both East Germany and West Germany and all divided countries to the United Nations.

Speaking only in answer to questions, he said he did not know whether a security conference of all European countries, the United States and Canada-promoted especially by the Soviet Union-would take place this year. But he declared that such regional efforts helped the UN "in the field of maintaining international peace."

"I think," Mr. Waldheim said. "the visits of the President of the United States of America can-and, I hope, will—contribute to a further détente.

Period of Détente "I think... that we are living in a period of international de-tente... and I think the getting together of these heads of state, who play an important role in international affairs, is very helpful in this respect."

Mr. Waldhelm said the détente was especially notable in Europe. He remarked that that continent, tion as soon as possible." Of the UN's search for Mideast peace through special mediator Gunnar Jarring, Mr. Waldheim said: "I don't see any reason why we should give up the efforts. It is our intention to proceed, and we have a sound basis for continuing the efforts."

House Approves $20-Billion Rise In Debt Ceiling

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (Reuters).—The House today approved a $20-billion increase in the national debt ceiling, well short of the $50-billion rise the Nixon administration was seeking to finance its budget deficits. The Democrat-dominated House voted a lower figure so the administration would have to ask for another increase at the end of June-the end of the current fiscal year. This would give the view Mr. Nixon's economic policles before the party conventions choose their presidential candi-

The House legislation now goes to the Senate Finance Committee for discussion.

6,000 in Iran Missing After Snow Storm

Region in South Completely Isolated

TERRAN, Feb. 10 (AP),-At least 6,000 persons were reported missing tonight as reports from blizzard ravaged areas of Iran reached the capital,

Areas of the country which were reported to have been paralyzed by huge anowfalls include south Iran, where at least 4,000 villagers from the Ardekan area were reported trapped or buried beneath eight meters of snow which fell after four years of drought.

According to the newspaper Etteleat, the villages of Kakkan and Kumar, near Ardekan, are among those buried, and searchers have failed to discover any signs of their inhabitants.

The paper says the region's road, cable and telephone com-munications are completely cut. Iranian Premier Amir Abass Moveida, co-ordinating searches from his office in Tehran, has appealed to the civil and military authorities in the northwestern regions to do all they can to rescue the thousands of people reportedly trapped and buried by the snow.

A day of sun today after the weeklong snowfall gave searchers a chance to reach some of the trapped trains, snowbound vehi-cles or buried villages in the stricken areas.

The small village of Sheklab, near Rezaeln, on the Iranian-Turkish border, was one area where rescuers arrived, apparently too late. They uncovered 18 bodies and did not immediately find any survivors of the 100 per-sons who lived in the village, which is situated at the foot of the Zagrus mountain range, which appears to be the center of the

U.K., China Resume Talks About Envoys

PEKING, Feb. 10 (Reuters),-Britain and China have resumed talks on the question of exchanging ambassadors. There was some speculation here today that an announcement might be made before the arrival of President Nixon Feb. 21. The talks were suspended late last year with the departure, for medical reasons, of John Den-son, then British charge d'affaires.

Officials at the British office here declined to give any details of the renewed talks other than confirming that they have started again, with the new chargé d'affaires. John Addis. But there has been some speculation among East European and Arab quarters here that an agreement might be near. Observers point out that China ters).—The Cambodian govern-ment today indicated it might launch an attack against Communist troops occupying the ancient temple complex of Angkor Wat, site of priceless Buddhist sculptures and shrines The official news agency, Agence Khmere Presse, said the Cambodian cabinet had decided not to rule out action under Clause 4 of the 1954 Hague Convention which permits an attack on cultural artifacts in cases of severe military necessity.

The Cambodian Army at present is forbidden to use weapons or even mount patrols in the vicinity of Angkor for fear of damaging the ruins.

Angkor, in northwest Camboois, has been used by the Communists as a military base since the Indochina war spread to Cambodia nearly two years ago.
The nearby town of Siem Reap has been under regular missile attack during the last few weeks and clashes between government and Communist troops are reported almost daily.

tice—negative in its purpose, anarchistic in its approach, nihilistic in its results—has been en-dured regrettably by the government and people for over seven weeks," he said.

The president's speech came after a week of industrial and civil unrest including a strike by policemen in Hyderabad that ended today and a dock workers' strike here. In addition, a nationwide general strike has been called tomorrow to protest against mass killings of non-Bengalis in Bangladesh.

Main Features

Outlining features of the new labor policy, Mr. Bhutto said it would include giving workers effective participation in management of industry, increasing their share in annual profits, intro-ducing a system of shop stewards, streamlining the pro-cedure for airing grievances, compulsory payment of a bonus linked to profits, aiding workers in finding housing, and provid-ing employer-paid education for one child from each worker's family. family.

crais obsted Mr. Nixon next Many Democrats weren't buving this line, but asserted their right to criticize freely an incombent President's policies.

Too, they had a further Republican blast to mult over the advice from GOP national chairman Bob Dole that Democratic candidates should either retract their criticism or "withdraw from the race."

Sen. Dole's statement that "the choice is clear; retract or withdraw" came in a speech last night at Long Beach, Calif. It followed by a few hours President Nimm's statement. "I have no complaint over the fact that during this period when I have hear ending the war I did not begin, I have been subjected to vigorous criticism." Mr. Nixon appeared on the surface to be trying to placate the Democrats after the President's "chief of sieff," HR. Haldeman, said that presidential candidates were "consciously" helping the enemy by their tritleism.

But Mr. Nixon's suggestion that they could prolong the war by anti-administration statements on Vietnam drew sharp Democratic fire today.

New York's Mayer John Lindsay, a Democratic presidential candidate, called it "McCarthylsm pure and simple? He added: "The attack on Victnam dissenters would be unwirthy of notice except that it revives the character-assaustration which was

Sen George McGovern, of South Dakota, another candidate, snapped: "I do not intend to allow either the White House of Hanoi to determine what I say about Victnam or when I say it." Earlier he had demanded that Mr. Nixon either fird Mr. Haldeman or "personally and publicly" reputiate the side's remarks, which he called un-American and bordering on charging elected officials with treason.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, the Maine contender in the Demo-cratic race, whose speech last week criticizing Mr. Nixon's eight-point Vietnam peace proposals precipitated the administration offensive, reported in low key. Uris Ordered to Pay Half-Million To Ex-Spy for Data in 'Topaz'

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.-Novelist Leon Uris must give up half of more than $1 million in proceeds from the book "Topaz" to his French-born collaborator, Philippe de Vosjoli, a Los Angeles superior court has decided.

Judge Howard H. Schmidt ruled that Mr. de Vosjoli, 51, for many years head of the French secret service in Washington, D.C. was entitled to half the royalties from publication of the book and from its sale for a motion picture Now living in Miami, Mr. de Vosjoli said that under a contract signed May 27, 1965, the novelist promised him half of all income from the book in exchange for material Mr. de Vosjoli had prepared, drawing on his experiences during the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. Mr. de Vosjoli complained that Mr. Uris, 47, had paid him only $65,000. The court directed that $161,050 must be paid Mr. de Vosjoli immediately, with 7 percent interest from various dates beginning Jan. 15, 1968, when the suit said Mr. UMs ceased sharing royalties.

Payment of $191,300, the judge decreed, must be made by assignment from Mr. Uris of 50 percent of the royalties coming from the "Topaz" publisher, Bantam Books, Inc. Also provided for in the decision were future accountings of proceeds, with

Mr. de Vosjoli to receive half of them.

Drastic Cut

U.S. Plans Quota 18 Percent of 1971

By Harold M. Schmeck Jr. WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (NYT).

The government plans to cut the 1972 domestic production quota for amphetamines to about 17 or 18 percent of last year's production in an effort to cope vith one of the nation's most serious drug problems, officials said vesterday.

In December, the Justice Department announced proposed 1973 production quotes of 60 percent of last year's estimated actual production. Since then there have been several indications that the final quota would be substantially lower.

Yesterday, officials of the department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs said final figures would probably be published next week. Barring some unexpected change, they said, the final quota will be in the range of 17 to 18 percent of last year's estimated production.

It has been estimated that, in nt years, 20 percent of all U.S.-produced amphetamines have gone into illicit channels. The powerful stimulants are taken by drug abusers for the "high" they produce. Others, notably long-distance truck drivers, use the drugs to stay awake among those who use the drugs legitimately on prescription, doctors believe there are many who use the stimulants excessively. Improper use of the drugs is considered extremely dangerous and has led to deaths.

The current year is the first for which the government has had authority to set production quotas for these products,

Although manufacturers had asked for a 1972 total that was double last year's estimated production, officers of the bureau said they did not receive a single objection from industry to the proposed overall cut.

There were objections of the opposite kind from persons and groups not related to the industry. In essence these called the proposed cuts a step in the right direction, but far too small in scope. For example the Huntington, N.Y., Narcotles Guidance Council said the cut to 60 percent of last year's production still left a quota that was 700 percent above the amount really needed for legitimate medical purposes.

Amphetamine Chief U.S. and Swiss Probers Deferred Raises Output Faces Confer on Hughes Book Affair

ZURICH, Feb. 10 (UPI).—The chief U.S. prosecutor investigating the Howard Hughes "autobiography" case held consultations with the head of the Swiss investigation, Zurich prosecutor Peter Veleti, after arriving from New York today.

A police spokesman said Robert T. Morvillo, assistant U.S. attorney in the Southern District of New York, and an assistant, John J. Tigne, jr., met with Mr. Veleff in his office at 3:00 p.m. The spokesman said one of the topics discussed was the latest testimony in New York of author Clifford Irving and his Swiss wife, Edith, but he refused to disclose any details of the testimony. The Irvings have appeared before a New York federal grand jury probing the affair. The two U.S. prosecutors flew back to New York tonight. Mr. Irving says he collaborated with the recluse American billionaire on the "autobiography." but Mr. Hughes has issued state

On their arrival at Zurich's Kloten Airport at 1:00 p.m. Mr. Morvillo and Mr. Tigue were joined by U.S. postal inspector Donald Hunter, who had arrived earlier, American officials said. U.S. postal authorities are investigating the possibility that the mails were used for fraudulent transactions.

Mr. Tigue declined to discuss his and his superior's aims in coming here but said; "Our talks with Veleff will be important."

Mr. Nixon's World

Richard M. Nixon has already made his mark as one of the relatively few American Presidents to have altered, to an appreciable degree, the course of world history by a dramatic change in American foreign policy. It is easy enough to point to the contradictions between the earlier Nixon and the one in the White House today. One might similarly emphasize the difference between the Woodrow Wilson who was "too proud to fight" and the commander in chief of World War I; between the isolationist Franklin D. Roosevelt of the London Economic: Conference and the progenitor of the United Nations; between the cold war warrior John F. Kennedy and his enduring myth. The fact is that Richard Nixon has opened up a great number of new possibilities for American international action—and inaction that seemed virtually impossible a decade, or even five years ago.

This new flexibility, with its promises as well as its dangers, is amply evident in the President's lengthy and detailed message to Congress on the State of the World. It is a record, in Mr. Nixon's own word, of many "breakthroughs." even though these have yet to be consolidated. It is clouded by one huge, unresolved dilemma: The Vietnamese war, and by one serious error in rhetorical tactics. Mr. Nixon himself has contributed. however moderately, to a public atmosphere in which the limits of debate on foreign affairs overshadow the substance of that debate.

The President made the point that candidates to succeed him should not give the other side in Vietnam reason to hold out until after the election. The argument has merit, but only if there is a measure of broad consensus within the country on what constitutes an "honorable" peace in Southeast Asia-and this consensus does not exist. For years, the United States has been plagued by the indubitable fact that the other side hoped it had more to gain from the dissolution of the American will to fight than from any concessions it might make, or victories it might win in the field. That situation can only be emphasized by American squabbling over the permissible limits of political debate.

And from Mr. Nixon's own standpoint, his genuine accomplishments in the field of foreign relations can be obscured by the same squabbling. To be sure, it can also give him an excuse for any failure of his policies in Vietnam by saying that if he had been backed by the domestic opposition, the foreign opposition would have collapsed. But that would be an exploitation of American lives quite as reprehensible as any efforts of the Democrats in seeking votes by opposing the White House.

Mr. Nixon's world has more elements of hope than the worlds of Presidents Johnson or Kennedy. He would do well to stand on that, rather than dispute the right of the Democrats and dissidents generally to argue

Setback for Mr. Brandt

The temporary defeat in the Bundesrat for West Germany's treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland means just one thing: The Christian Union parties thus far are maintaining solidarity in opposition to the pacts negotiated by Chancellor Brandt's government; and Bonn's ratification will consequently be more difficult than many observers had anticipated. The Bundesrat (federal council) is now committed by a one-vote margin to reject the treaties unless the government can provide satisfactory clarifications on many points.

This need not be serious if Mr. Brandt's Social Democratic party and its Free Democratic partner can maintain their six-vote majority in the Bundestag, where the fate of the treatles will be determined.

The Bundesrat can only delay ratification and, in certain circumstances, require the government to obtain an absolute majority of the whole Bundestag membership for pas-

As Mr. Brandt says, there is "no sensible and realistic alternative" to the treaties and to his policy of seeking better relations with Eastern Europe. It was clear during his recent visit to the United States, however, that Rainer Barzel, leader of the Christian Democratic Union, emphatically disagrees with this view and intends to oppose the treaties all the way, whatever the consequences for Soviet-German relations. The Bundesrat vote underscores the fact that Mr. Barzel must be taken seriously.

International Opinion

'State of the World' Message

President Nixon's report to Congress stands out immediately as one of the most weighty. most serious and best argued statements of American foreign policy since the end of World War II. In manner it is sober, factual, clear, without any obvious tremolo passages or over-contrived rhetoric. In substance it goes into American deeds, hopes and difficulties in almost every part of the earth and above the earth. . .

One of the strengths of Mr. Nixon's survey is that it does not go too far back on the post, and at every point he indicates that the U.S. administration is ready to take the more favorable view of Soviet policy if Moscow gives them half a chance.

-From the Times (London).

Ever since President Nixon started talking about his desire to present a "low profile" in international affairs, his allies have been apprehensive and uneasy. Could this mean that he was about to shuffle off his responsibilities and leave us, like Madam Butterfly, holding the baby?

No one who has studied his third "State of the World" report to Congress could suspect this of him any more. He fully recognizes America's international obligations. He is also obviously alert to various dangers which he might perhaps have overlooked in the search for a detente with Russia and China.

-From the Daily Telegraph (London).

The American empire, in the form that it assumed in 1945 and retained until, say, the brief attack on the U.S. Embassy in Saigon in 1968, has ceased to be. The United States is now a more experienced. and somewhat chastened, republic. Its ailies, from Japan to Western Europe, are more self-confident: Its natural adversaries are no longer united in a single monolithic bloc. Yet its military power remains the force upon which the nations of the West must ultimately depend for their security.

These facts of present-day international life are clearly recognized in Washington, and not least by Dr. Henry Kissinger, the adviser to the President whose manner of analyzing foreign policy can be discerned on almost every page of Mr. Nixon's voluminous report to Congress.

-From the Financial Times (London).

Washington's Vietnam Dilemma

Although it is understandable that the North Vietnamese are unwilling to accept a fixation of the status quo, it is equally clear that President Nixon cannot afford, either on the home front or abroad, to transform the accelerated withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam into an almost treacherous letdown of his allies or to exchange the chance of a stalemate for a blatant capitulation. The "silent right" is still more powerful at the American polls than the vociferous left . . . moreover neither Nixon's Democratic rivals in the forthcoming presidential election campaign, nor European critics of official American policy, would be well served by a self-induced collapse of the already weakened U.S. prestige in Asia. An America which would precipitously leave such small Asian allies as South Vietnam, Taiwan and South Korea in the lurch, might one day behave similarly in Europe, which would inevitably deepen the Soviet shadow over the Old World.

-From Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

The connecting link between Cyrus and Mohammed Reza, who both ruled from Persia (now called Iran) is that both bore the appellation King of Kings. There is no lineal connection between the shah and Cyrus of the ancient Achaemenid dynasty and present-day Iran can claim no similarly pompous role on the contemporary world stage, being but a third-rank power. Between Mohammed Reza's 50-year-old Pahlavi dynasty and that of Cyrus, this land has been ruled by Sessanian, Turkish, Mongol and Turkmenian dynastics as well as transient foreign conquerors. Karl Marx, a prophet with little official popularity here, wrote that history does indeed repeat itself— the first time as tragedy, the second time as farce. One might offhand be tempted to think of the gaudy tent town with its mushroom dwellings, butlers' pantries and ivory dial telephones as farcical replicas of the cruel hard monolith towering above in ruined splendor.

Yet the profession of kingship is still dynamic here today. For its epoch the empire procisimed by Cyrus was revolutionary. Despite acceptance of harsh customs it granted subject peoples a kind equality under what may be mankind's first bill of rights.

The present sheh, in his own way, has sought to impose revolu-tion upon his backward country, hampered by superstitious inheritance, corruption and failure to develop its rich potential. He has dictated agrarian reform and social changes that have been opposed by conservative church leaders and landed proprietors. He has ruled as well as reigned, seeking to demonstrate that active kingship can be a modern pro-

How profoundly this dictated revolution probes is difficult to say. Statistically, oil-rich Iran has advanced by leaps in produc-tive and industrial capacity. Tehran is booming. That is the dream of today's King of Kings and in many respects he has advanced significantly along his chosen road. But it takes time to bidge Asia. Peasants were com-Moscow, though, the reaction was often laughter. "He's copying our Lenin!" as one Soviet official put it with a guilaw. And so he was-at least in nomenciature.

Perhaps the last significant de-. cisions Lenin took before losing his strength to a series of strokes were the economic measures of the early 1920s which largely restored private trade in the Soviet Union. These became known as the "new economic policy," and the Russian acronym "Nep" (pronounced almost as in English) entered the language. The fabled "Nepman"—nattily dressed, pockets full of rubles, ready to buy or sell anything anywhere became a Soviet legend, and the legend is still alive.

It may be foolhardy to draw serious comparisons, but there are striking similarities between Lenin's Nep and Mr. Nixon's. Both were adopted in crisis situations. Both represented startling departures from the previous policies and prejudices of the two leaders. Both had strong political implies-tions. And both had dramatic short-term results.

Abandoned

In the end, Lenin's Nep was abandoned with a vengeance in favor of Stalin's forced collectivization and industrialization. For Lenin's successors, retrogression to limited private enterprise was too painful to accept.

Whether Lenin agreed that Nep. was a retrogression isn't known.
On occasion he said it was. At other times he called it, "A return-to the correct position." One fact is more certain: Lenin never dreamed of the brutal policies Stalin later adopted to push Russia into the modern age. What he would have done with the Russian economy had he lived more than 54 years is one of the many beguling mysteries that VI. Lenin left behind.

The contemporary Soviet Union contains almost no hint of those tumultuous early 1920s, when Lenin was an active politician and not a worshiped idol. That was a time of creativity, crisis and intellectual tumult, when various factions argued contra-dictory positions with great spirit, often in the columns of Pravda. The history of that period is a reminder of how new the current Soviet system is and of how much it has changed from Lenin's original conceptions.

Lenin's New replaced his own:

dent is grim. The Soviet Rep had substantial successes, but they were measured in Russian and Soviet terms, and they took several years to achieve. No presidential election campaigns interfered with the process.

Inflation during the first years of the Nep was beyond an American President's most despairing nightmares. The number of rubies in airculation increased nearly 20,000 times from 1921 to 1923, as the government cranked off paper money to pay the peasants and workers.

Crime Rate Up

Even this degree of infishing did not cure unemployment, which continued at a high level throughout the 1920s. The crime rate (whose existence is not even society) shot up. Soviet citizens who might have been unhappy with these conditions given a chance to vote on any alternative to Lenin's succe in the Kremlin. (Poor health forced him out of the active leadership after 1922.)

If one accepts the theory that poetry is at least as important as politics or economics, then the Russians must be credited with one achievement of the Map period which Americans are unlikely to approximate. That would be the writings of Lys. Ilf and Eugene Petrov, two gifted human-ists whose "Twelve Chairs" and "The Little Golden Calf"—chronicles of the Nepmen and their world are classics of Soviet satire still popular today.

Much of Ilf and Petrov's satira still applies, though one wonders if it could be published by a contemporary writer. In one adventure the "Great Schemer." But even if an election is accepted as inevitable, the crisis will not be resolved. There is still a major problem about the sort of caretaker government that should lead the country during the compaign

The Christian Democratic party executive was meeting tonight to discuss this issue

Although Mr. Colombo is still in charge of a caretaker cabinet, many Christian Democrats feel that a different leader would give them a better chance of success at the polls.

Mr. Andreotti, who has not yet declined his government-forming mandate, may be asked to form a new government which would present itself to parliament and then resign to face an election.

CAIRO. Feb. 10 (UPI).—Prest-dent Anwar Sedat has decided make a loud din that would chto call the nation's highest policy- scure Washington's support and making body into emergency accsion to discuss future moves against Israel, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said today.

Al Ahram said Mr. Sadat will meet Wednesday with more than 1.700 representatives of the national congress of the Arab Socualist Union, Egypt's only political party, to discuss strategy.

The president decided on the emergency meeting following student demonstrations last month in support of immediate war with Israel and after his trip last week to the Soviet Union, the news-Political sources said Mr. Sadat was seeking a vote of confidence for his policies from the congress following student criticism that he was dragging his feet in resuming the war.

The newspapers, among them Hanretz and Maarit, said Mr. Nusselbeh may be acting as a go-between in peace contacts between Israel and Jordan.

Maariv also said that at a closed meeting of her Labor party Tuesday night Mrs. Meler cald it is not impossible that contacts with Jordan on the possibility of a separate peace agreement, could begin this year.
In an interview with Maariv

Mr. Nusseibeh said he met with Mrs. Meir to exchange views "and hear Israel's position at first

"I do not see myself now as a possible mediator between the Israeli and Jordanian governments, because the problems between the two countries are so complicated that only the leadership of the two countries could face them and try and find solutions to them," he said.

Mr. Nusseibeh is an East Jerusalem lawyer and the leading Arab political figure on the Israeli occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Language, Language Learning and Linguistics

PARIS (IHT).-When one considers that more than 2,000 languages are spoken in the world today, it must be agreed that what the Lord did at Babel was a triumph.

Today, accompanying the craze for learning languages, a booming industry is producing books. kits and dictionaries of almost every size, shape and quality and flooding an eager market with audio-visual materials of many

Mishrooming private and pubthe institutions offer the "latest and fustest" means to language acquisition. New methods aprange from the arduous but guaranteed "total immersion" courses to quick package deals, some with doubtful but ringing logans such as "Learn Upper Moravian in Ten Easy Lessons or Even Morons Speak Burush-aski-Why Net You?"

Underlying the whole frenetic movement is one basic reality: New life has been given to the sindy of languages as modern linguistics moves rapidly toward becoming an empirical science although practical application of research is only beginning to seep into the classroom.

There was a situation some-what analogous to the current rage for language learning in Sin-century England," said Norman Weinstein, an English teacher at the Lycee International at St. Germain-en-Lave. "Members of the rising middle class had houses, coaches and servants but possessed no spoken or written language consistent with their new rank. So they were all desperately hiring Scotch crammarians to teach them the

There seems no doubt that for as long as man continues on earth, the linguists will have an inexhaustible field for their investigations. The great lan-guages tend to extend their domain at the expense of the smaller ones and yet there is little chance that humanity will ever speak one single tongue. and as useful as it has proved at a number of international conferences, even Esperanto, the most elaborately constructed of the some 100 artifical languages created by men in recent years. has abandoned the hope of replacing natural tongues. The main reason for this, besides the sosence of cultural props and literature, is that Esperanto must resulty be bound by strict rules whereas change is the manistation of life in language.

Leading Languages

University in 1970, there are only a dozen languages (apart from three major Chinese languages) which have 50 million a child or is lucky enough to live R) or more native speakers—English, in the country where it is spoken, spoken by 300 million, Hindustani even the most optimistic teachers. (Hindi-Urdu) by 200, Russian by - 135, Spanish by 160, German by 105, Japanese by 100, French by 75. Javanese by 50. Bengali by E 85 Portuguese by 90, Italian by 60 and Arabic by 90.

But lest English-speaking peoples scorn language learning on the premise that the rest of the world will be able and willing to speak bad English by the 21st century, they should know that languages disappear as easily as

From the Middle Ages to the time of Napoleon Bonaparte, French, which had been the lingua franca of the Crusaders, was the leading European tongue. In his day, Shakespeare addressed a potential audience of fewer than 6 million people.

"So the Lord scattered them abroad from there over the jace of the earth, and they left off building the city. Therefore its name was called Babel. because there the Lord confused the language of all the earth." Genesis 11:9.

More immediately they should prepare to yield their predominant position to Chinese. Hitherto plagued by the existence of mutually unintelligible dialects, Mandarin Chinese has now been printed in a newly devised Latin alphabet generally known as puloughua (universal language) which, now compulsory in schools, will soon constitute a single great language uniformly written and pronounced by 800 million Chinese throughout the People's Re-

Similar efforts are being made in many developing areas to pre-serve and fortify mother tongues or to build a single national language where the existence of many impedes all efforts at education and progress. Conscious of language not only as a symbol of spiritual worth but, to many cases, as a question of national survival. these countries are making a colossal effort and, with the help of Unesco teams of linewists. socio-linguists and social anthropologists, applying new knowl-edge and techniques to the sointion of their sometimes overwhelming problems

Change

There have been many remarkable achievements, such as the able achievements, such as the example of Israel in hringing Hebrew, which was like Latin, a dead language, back to life, or the feat of Indonesia's revolutionary government in putting through universal acceptance of Bahas, structured from hundreds of existing language. But much remains to be done is such places as India where there is strong political and religious corposition to adopting Bindi to replace 14 national tongues.

Closer to home, the Council of Cultural Cooperation of the Council of Europe has launched a major program for modern language learning in the context of the building of Europe. "If Europeans are to cooperate," the council insists, "they must improve their methods of communicating with each other, learn to understand and speak each other's languages to a far greater extent than they have in the past."

For us in the West, the motivation for language learning may vary widely from professional or scademic necessity to the desire to have more fun on a vacation in Italy. A French philosopher According to figures published housewife in Paris may study y Prof. Mario Pei of Columbia Spanish to be able to according to 1970.

Whatever the motivation, unless. one learns a second language as even the most optimistic teachers. will agree that there is no easy way to learn a foreign language. Although some people may learn more quickly than others, it is. essentially a question of practice and patience, however "advanced" a method may be.

Still much progress has been made to meet the great change in the nature and extent of the demand for modern-language

In the early years of the century this demand came primarily from a cultivated elite more interested in gaining an understanding of how a Dante or Goethe handled his language than in learning how to put a modern version of that language to his own practical use. Teaching in the schools was geared to that demand. Thus it was possible to attain high academic distinction in a foreign language yet hardly be able to ask for a cup of coffee. Today the greatest demand is for an ability to converse fluently, to understand and to be un-

In many ways the roots for new echniques and changed outlook towards language teaching can be traced back to the urgent need to train officers and engineers to speak foreign lan-guages during World War II. Machines developed at the time in the United States led to a veritable revolution characterized by mass advocacy of the audio-visual method. This approach dominated the postwar scene and reached a climax during the decade 1958 to 1968.

Amiel Van Tesslar, now director of the Paris branch of New York University, set up the first "language laboratory" at SHAPE headquarters near Paris. Victims were literally stuffed with French, German or whatever for eight hours a day," he said. "It was a strenuous busi-ness to say the least, but those who survived really knew the language in three to six months." Following the war, similar movements for improving language learning techniques developed elsewhere. Notable among these was that instigated by the International Association of French Teachers (AIPF), partly as an attempt to stimulate and serve the speaking of French throughout the world. Intensive research was carried out at the Centre International d'Etudes Pédagogiques in Sèvres and at the Ecole Normale Supérieure in St. Cloud for audio-visual mate-introduction of audiovisual methods has already produced a generation of young people whose spoken language is much better. But full-scale audiovisual equipment is prohibitively expensive for a public school sys-tem and this in itself has prevented any really widespread

At the Lycée Pilote de Sevres. an annex of the Centre Pedagogique, a fully equipped language iaboratory with 18 units, a maximum for adequate teacher supervision, costs about 8,000 francs ($1,600) per unit comprising listening device plus speaking and recording track, or nearly $20,000 for the complete laboratory.

However, audio-visual aids are looked upon as extremely useful tools which should be used with equipped wherever possible with tape recorder and slide projector. In the final analysis, however, nothing can replace the competent instructor. It is terribly unwise, say some experts, to pour large sums into machines at the expense of teacher training.

"I am convinced that there is no one ideal method," said Edgar Scherer, headmaster of the Lycée International in St. Germain-en-Laye. "You may have seven classes and seven different methods. Neither will these be what they were two years ago or what they will be two years from now. In the first place, students change. So do their motivations and their parents'

Wherever new methods have been adopted, however, the four language skills are learned in the following order: understanding, speaking, reading and writing, according to the principle that nothing should be spoken before it is heard, nothing should be read before it is spoken, and nothing written before it is read. And it is recognized that learning a language is not a matter of acquiring a set of grammar rules and building a vocabulary.

Translation is discouraged in all cases except at an advanced stage on the theory that, while it may teach the student something about his own language, it only encourages him to make mistakes in the language under

In the teaching of French a tendency to continue with gram-matical explanation has lingered longer than in English. One of the reasons for this is that French is a far more strictly controlled language. Despite attempts by Samuel Johnson in the 18th century to create one, there has never been an English Academy comparable to the staid and conservative Académie Française. Therefore English is a far more organic language, growing struc-turally like a tree responding to

Yet in French as well, the paradigms: "fe parle, tu parles il parle ..." so familiar to prewar generations, has largely been war generations, and angular dropped in favor of complete sentences such as "Je parle le français," "Henri parle avec Jeanne." And rather than memorizing the rule that, in French, "an adjective agrees in gender and number with the noun it modifies" students will, in their structured conversations, form sentences around "le chapeau vert" or "la petite plume sur la table."

The leitmotiv in English classes "pattern drills." Careful analysis of our language shows that it can be reduced to a limited number (about 13) of these "pat-terns" which can be constructed around the four sentence types: declarative, exclamatory, interrogative and imperative. These then are constantly drilled, re-peated and reviewed in "kernel lessons" from simple to compound, complex and compoundcomplex structures while, at the same time, tenses are introduced and vocabulary built.

Enormous progress has been made in textbooks at all levels from "pictionaries" and "con-versational" cut-out books for small children in Scott Foresman's "English Around the World" series, to individually programmed kits which teachers are finding highly superior to a text-book Produced by SRA (Science Research Associates), a branch of IBM, the kits consist of boxes of color cards, three to four lan-guage levels to a box. The child advances, under teacher supervision, according to his own speed, charting himself as he

William G. Moulton, professor of linguistics at Princeton, is convinced that eventually, and without his having to go so far as studying linguistics in gradnate school, a student will one day be able to acquire a kind "linguistic sophistication" which will make the learning of a foreign language not only less arduous, but more efficient and

There is today, however, a nagging consciousness that per-haps before learning a second language, many people would do better learning their own.

One of the most significant results of the foreign language movement is that many methods evolved here are being adopted by teachers of maternal languages as well, and these methods are particularly applicable to situa-tions involving culturally or eco-nomically underprivileged children whose vernacular often quite handicaps them in their own

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Feb. 10 (IHT).—Sam Peckinpah has done it again, shot for shot, if not word for word. He has followed that epic of squirting tomato juice, "The Wild Bunch," with another bloody Mary, "Straw Dogs" (at the Mercury and the Chiny Palaca in English) The scene has been shifted from the Texas frontier in 1910 to con-temporary Cornwall. In place of brutal raids across the Mexican border, there is a mad raid on the home of a visiting American pro-fessor (Dustin Hoffman) for whom the natives entertain an intense, inexplicable dislike. They cheat him on the repairs of a barn roof; they hang his cat and rape his wife; and, when he humanely shelters the village idiot (suspected of a sex murder) from lynching, they make their savage onslaught. He bravely withstands the attack and slaughters the whole band of drunken maniacs. Complaints have been lodged against Peckinpah's excessive violence, but it is hilarious rather than sadistic-whatever its in-tent. The sight of an actor wriggling in a beartrap as he spurts fake blood is comic, not terrifying. The trap, one is aware. is of rubber and the actor is better at squirming than at acting. Again, when another receives a load of buckshot in the face and subsequently drips catsup one is reminded more of a Mack Sennett pie-throwing scene than of nely wounds.

Peckinpah seems to have been more preoccupied with staging hotheaded frays than he was with the preparation of a plausible scenario. Until the frenzied finish one believes there must be some secret to the Yankee savant's unpopularity in a Cornish hamlet. One suspects that he is some strayed gangster from Chicago whom the underworld is reaching out to punish. But such is not the case. He apparently revolts the local barilies on sight. He is just an innocaous Milquetoast, lost in his studies and in love with his young wife. When challenged, he rises to the defense of his foyer. "Straw Doga" is Grand Guignol with close-ups.

One doesn't have to go to the movies in Paris to encounter Spanish maids. They are on hand in many Parisian households, being, it would seem, the only domestics left. "Des Espagnoles à Paris"—from the Madrid studios and (at the Vendome in its original version with French subtitles)—begins interestingly as a sociological study of Spanish girls come to the French capital to seek employment. It then trails off into a mother-love drama, one of the maidens being deflowered, becoming pregnant and, after deciding against an abortion in an hysterical scene, giving birth to a bouncing baby boy, consolation for all her pathetic woes.

"The Love Machine" (at the Elysées-Cinema in English) is an adaptation by Sam Taylor of Jacqueline Susann's best seller. It traces the career of a young and unscrupulous TV newscaster who. largely through his amorous intrigues, especially his liaison with an executive's wife, becomes a national personality. He is played by John Phillip Law as though he were a partially animated wax mannequin from the shop window of a Madison Avenue tailor.

The fault is not entirely Mr. Law's. Such a role requires the utmost histrionic tact and courts the danger of evoking derisive laughter, at least from the male portion of the audience. The actor who poses as a fellow who is catnip to all women must pussyfoot as artfully as Lowell Sherman, Lou Tellegen and Robert Hillard, who often wrote such assignments for themselves. Nor did they always succeed in silencing ridicule. Even Valentino would have had a tough time of it in Mr. Law's part for the screen often absurd. The film retells Miss Susann's novel mechanically. The TV studio conniving, supposedly daring boudoir episodes and wild Hollywood parties are like tableaux in the Musée Grévin.

The best film to be released in Paris this week is an old one: Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights," regarded by many as his chef d'ocuvre, though I would cast my vote for "The Gold Rush." In any case, "City Lights" is a dazzling pattern of hilarity and pathos into which have gone all the wonderful humor and invention of the comic master. Chaplin's next-tolast silent opus, the film reveals his art in full flower.

The thematic thread-that of blindness which imagines it beholds beauty and, with the return of vision, finds only the commonplace and the sadly ugly-is not novel But it is transformed by the Chaplin pantomimic magic into moving drama. One roars again at its half-forgotten gags. Lights" brings back some halfforgotten screen faces: Hank Mann as the swaggering pugilist and Harry Myers-the Connecti-cut Yankee of the first movie version of the Mark Twain Isatasy—as the millionaire who, when drunk, befriends the wistful vagrant and who, when sober, fails to recognize him. The next Chaplin re-release will be "The Kid."

been seen for so long. The 10th annual week of Canadian films was observed at Poitiers last weekend with an assortment of motion pictures con-cerning Canadian problems.

Twenty-five features in addition to 25 short documentaries were selected for showing at Le Berry cinema. Among the outstanding offerings were Perrault's "Wake Up, Mes Bons Amis," Jutra's "My Uncle Antoine," Lamothe's "Le Mépris n'Aura qu'un Temps."

The French-Canadian filmmakers made their breakthrough ten years ago with Claude Jutra's "A Tout Prendre" and the Per-rault-Michel Brault "Pour la Suite du Monde."

Perrault's "Wake Up, Mes Bons Amis," made in 1970, concerns a biologist seeking the national soul amid the woodcutters in the Canadian Rockles. There is a Turgenev-like lyricism to Perrault's cinematic treatment

$1.3 Million Work Found In Storeroom

Tiny English Museum Owns a Top La Tour

TONDON, Feb. 10 (IRT).-A previously unknown painting by the 17th-century Prench master Georges de La Tour, 'The Dice Players," has been discovered in an attic storeroom of a small museum in Middlesbrough, an industrial town in northeast Eng-

The painting has been valued at £500,000 (about $1.3 million: by Christopher Wood of Christie's auction house in London. He found it during a routine valuation of the Presion Hall Social Museum collection, according to The Times (London).

An authority on the work of La Tour, Benedict Nicholson, editor of the Burlington Magazine, said, "What makes the discovery so important is not only that La Tour is now regarded as one of the greatest French artists of the 17th century, but only 29 works by him have been identified. Half of these have suffered to a greater or lesser extent, whereas The Dice Players' has been miracu-lously preserved." He added that "there is no doubt about its authenticity."

The painting, showing soldiers playing dice by candlelight, was donated to the museum by a Miss Annie Clepham in 1934 and has been kept in a storeroon ever since. How Miss Clepham acquired the work is not known.

The museum is not planning to sell the painting. It will reportedly be included in a La Tour exhibition planned in May at the Orangerie in Paris. Michel Laclotte, curator of painting at the Louvre, is coming to London next week to see the work.

Georges de La Tour (1593-1652) was born at Vic-sur-Seille and lived in Luneville in Lorraine.

Music in Paris: Unity in Diversity—Two Hungarians

DARIS, Feb. 10 (IHT).-Two young Hungarian pianists who have ery quickly established their formidable credentials at home and are now being revealed in the West-they recently toured the United States with the Hungarian Radio Orchestra, to much critical applause—have just passed through Paris in the offbeat but congenial format of a series of one-hour recitals at the Théatre de la

The two-Desso Ranki, 20, and Zoltan Kocsis, 19-cach gave a pair of solo concerts and then collaborated on a two-plano recital that packed the 1,200-seat theater to overflowing and was the high point of a series in which every bar was solid nourishment. Both young men have a musical maturity that goes beyond technique, of which both have plenty, yet their personalities are quite different,

Ranki, handsome and engaging, seems to have a predilection for the romantics, whom he interprets with brilliance and spontancity. He followed Schubert and Schumann with an electrifying performance of Lizzt's "Dante Sonata." Kocsis, still somewhat gawkily adolescent in appearance, is more moody and introspective. His solo program ranged from some rather derivative pieces by the contemporary Hungarian composer György Kurtag through Beethoven and Schumann to an exciting account of the Bartok Sonata.

Their joint recital was a triumph of unity in diversity. They manifestly enjoyed the playful yet profound interplay of virtuosity of Mozart's Sonata for Two Pianos (K448), which was followed by nicely poised performance of Brahms's Variations on a Theme by Haydn. Then, with Gaston Sylvestre and Gérard Pérotin as the fine but somewhat reticent percussionists, they explored the subtle world of timbres in Bartok's Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion.

Banker Alleges U.S. Hinders IMF

By H. Erich Heinemann FRANKFURT, Feb. 10 (NYT) One of Europe's leading central bankers took the United States to task here yesterday for "m-justifishly," and "unwarranted-ir hampering the operations of the International Monetary Fund. Owner Emminger, a director of Bundesbank, charged in a long interview that the United States had refused to cooperate in technical negotiations to permit the repsyment of some $1.4 billion currently owel to the find by a number of the other nations—mostly the United King-

"We don't see," Mr. Emminger seld, "that it is always three or four other countries that have always to do something in order to keep the fund going, and the United States just keeps alouf and does nothing."

Unjustifiably Negative He continued: "This is something which I find mjustifiably negative. It would really do a by of good if the United States would now find a way toward its paper contribution."

At are other central bankers,

Mr. Emminger was critical of the current low level of interest rates and easy money in the United States. But he predicted that the Federal Reserve System would soon realize that a more restrictive monetary policy was the "only instrument" available to keep the U.S. economy from going back into "full inflation." He added: "Sconer or later, and probably rather sooner, the extreme essiness of monetary policy

U.S. Cooperation Needed
Since the IMF's dollar holdings are now in excess of 75 percent of the U.S. cubts, this means that the British are mable to use their simple idollar reserves to repay the roughly $880 mil-lion they owe the fund.

According to Dr. Emminger, there are well-established techniques for handling such a problem, but they require participation by the United States.

If the United States were willing to cooperate in this manner regarding a portion of the debis owed to the fund—say, between one-third and one-half-Mr. Emminger said other nations, presumably including West Germany, would be prepared to make analogous arrangements regarding the balance.

Mr. Emminger expressed strong confidence that the general realignment of the major currencies agreed to Dec. 18 had been "a good one," and he asserted that the nations involved in it were unanimous in this conviction.

BAC Says Concorde Cost Estimate Too High

BRISTOL, England, Feb. 10 (AP-DJ).—British Aircraft Corp. (BAC) today described as "too pessimistic" a French estimate that the Concorde supersonic jet-liner would cost about $59 million at delivery prices in 1974. BAC referred to an estimate Jersey Nuclear's general manager, R. L. Dickman, concedes that "this is a high-risk research project." But, he says, the new process has the possibility to be economically competitive with present methods and eventually could result in a significant reduction in the cost of nuclear fuel for power plants." net earnings held about unchanged compared

Mr. Kantrowitz said that both Avco and Jersey Nuclear are "investing a lot of money" in the

The process of nuclear fission, or the continual release of nuclear energy to provide heat, occurs only in atoms of uranium-235, the lighter isotope of natural uranium. However, U-235 is so scarce that it makes up only 0.7 percent of natural uranium. A problem that faced the developers of the atomic bomb was to find a process for increasing or "enriching" the number of

The process they finally settled on and the one in use here, is called gaseous diffusion—wherein uranium is turned to gas and pumped through hundreds of metal barriers. These, in effect, filter out heavier, more common uranjum atoms, leaving a gas highly enriched in U-235.

In the European method, a centrifuge whirls the uranium around, in the form of gas, at incredibly high speeds. The heavier atoms that make up the bulk of natural uranium are thrown further from the center of the centrifuge than the lighter U-235 atoms, which remain in the center.

Details of the new process are difficult to come by. In fact, Mr. Kantrowitz says that "this kind of process has never been talked about and nothing about it has appeared in the literature as far as we know."

But a spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) says that, judging by the few details it has been told about the process, "we-looked over the and decided it didn't look

Mart Defies SEC On Membership

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (WP) --Philadelphia - Baltimore -Washington Stock Exchange has defied the Securities & Exchange Commission by refusing to bar mutual funds, insurance companies and other institutional nvestors from membership.

After a meeting of the P-B-Ws board of governors yesterday, president Elkins Wetherill said the exchange has "seen no arguments that would convince us that our membership policy is not in the public interest." If the exchange, the third largest of the regional exchanges, sticks to its position, it would set up a direct conflict with the SEC, which earlier this week said that membership on exchanges should be limited to firms that primarily serve the broad public

Mr. Wetherill said he guestioned whether the SEC has the power to force its decision on the exchange. "I have talked to some lawyers who tell me that they question the SEC's authority to force membership requirements." he said.

> virtual monopoly on supplying atomic fuel to nuclear power stations in the non-Communist world. The AEC is planning to change this by offering to share its fuel secrets with selected U.S. companies and at the same time allowing the companies access to the centrifuge technology that the AEC has been developing over the past few years.

The AEC is being forced to share its nuclear secrets because within the next four years a new fuel-processing plants. It is believed that industry must take over the process and must decide whether to build gaseous diffusion or centrifuge plants.

The new plants will be needed because it is expected that by 1980 about 20 percent of U.S. energy will be produced by nuclear power, compared with about 3 percent today. It is expected to rise to 50 percent by the turn of the century.

Mr. Kantrowitz would not say if the Avco laboratory has produced any manium fuel using the new process or if the process could produce nuclear fuel of a grade that could be used to make nuclear weapons.

An AEC spokesman said Avco and Jersey Nuclear have presented the agency with a "ticklish problem." He said that although the "potential for making weapons is there," the agency will not attempt to classify (or clamp down on) the process until the companies have the capability for making a kilogram of fuel in a Bausch & Lomb dropped 10 to 178. Tool Research fell 7 3.4 to 49 1.4. It traded recently at a record price of 68 7.8—up from last year's low of 20-based on expectations of the company's role in space shuttle development. Levitz gave up 3 7/8 to 126 1/4.

This furniture concern, with its stock experiencing pressure begations under way into its trading pattern, hit a peak of 159 1/4 several weeks ago.

The Dow Jones industrial average, ahead by more than 8 points at 12:30 p.m., finished with an advance of 256 at 921,28.

Dow's Best Level This meant that the blue-chip indicator, despite its steadily lagging strength in afternoon trading, managed to close at its best level in more than eight months. It posted its best finish since 928.06 on June 7. The Dow scampered ahead 11.59 yesterday to close at 918.72, and today it charged above the 915-920 band that had contained upswings repeatedly since early last summer. The 1971 closing high of 950.62 came on April 28. Some brokers labeled the market's action today as "self-correcting," implying that intermittent consolidations occur during a prolonged upswing. Wheelabrator-Frye, the volume leader eased 1/8 to 8 3/8. The stock has been extremely active in recent sessions. Today, the company reported higher operating earnings for 1971.

U.S. Upturn Is Continuing, Fed Bank Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP-DJ). -The acceleration of the economic recovery that occurred near the end of 1971 appears to have been carried into the new year, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York

However, the continued high personal savings rate and the rather sluggish retail sales picture indicate that consumers have not "overcome their hesttancy," the bank cautioned in its monthly bulletin issued today.

Partly auguring for continued economic momentum, the bank said, were the record levels of housing starts and building permits in December, which creased the likelihood that the housing boom will continue into the opening months of the year. In addition, it said that recent surveys of corporate plans for plant and equipment spending this year "suggest that a strengthening of recently weak business inverment could emerge this year." On the other hand, it observe that automobile sales tailed off in December and that other retail sales also closed the year "on a somewhat weak note." was buttressed in the fourth quarter by a continued relatively high personal savings rate of 7.7 percent, it said. But the bank concluded the recent federal tax reductions should help bolster

The companies are Jersey Nuclear, a subsidiary of Stan-

Avco Corp. Their announcement startled the industry because it had been thought there were only two practicable methods for making the fuel that were eco-two methods. All they will say about their discovery is that it justifiably," and "unwarrantedly" hampering the operations of the International Monetary Fund. Otmar Emminger, a director of the Bundesbank, charged in a long interview that the United States had refused to cooperate in technical negotiations to permit the repayment of some $1.4 billion currently owe. to the fund by a number of the other nations mostly the United Kingdom.

"We don't see," Mr. Emminger said, "that it is always three or four other countries that have always to do something in order to keep the fund going, and the United States just keeps aloof and does nothing."

'Unjustifiably Negative'

He continued: "This is something which I find unjustifiably negative. It would really do a lot of good if the United States would now find a way toward its proper contribution."
As are other central bankers, Mr. Emminger was critical of the current low level of interest rates and easy money in the United But he predicted that the Federal Reserve System would soon realize that a more restrictive monetary policy was the "only instrument" available to keep the U.S. economy from going back into "full inflation." He added: "Sooner or later, and probably rather sooner, the extreme easiness of monetary policy will be reversed."

foreign shareholdings in Montedison, which could lead to further collaboration on an international to provide credit to tide nations over temporary balance-of-payments problems—Mr. Emminger noted that a currency is not acceptable for repayment of an outstanding debt if the fund's holdings of that currency exceed percent of that nation's quota the fund.

U.S. Cooperation Needed Since the IMF's dollar holdings are now in excess of 75 percent of the U.S. quota, this means that the British are unable to use their ample dollar reserves to repay the roughly $980 million they owe the fund. According to Mr. Emminger, there are well-established techniques for handling such a problem, but they require participa-tion by the United States. Washington could draw deut-

If the United States were willing to cooperate in this manner regarding a portion of the debts owed to the fund—say, between one-third and one-half-Mr. Emminger said, other nations, presumably including West Germany, would be prepared to make analogous arrangements regarding the balance.

'I don't know why (authorities in Washington) are so afraid about such minor amounts." He added that "even if you have only $12 billion (in international reserves) you can still make a contribution of $300 million or $400 million," he said.

Mr. Emminger expressed strong confidence that the general realignment of the major currencies good one," and he asserted that the nations involved in it were unanimous in this conviction.

BAC Says Concorde Cost Estimate Too High

BRISTOL, England, Feb. 10 (AP-DJ).-British Aircraft Corp. (BAC) today described as "too pessimistic" a French estimate that the Concorde supersonic jetliner would cost about $59 million at delivery prices in 1974.

The process of nuclear fission. or the continual release of nuclear energy to provide heat, occurs only in atoms of uranium-235, the lighter isotope of natural uranium. However, U-235 is so scarce that it makes up only 0.7 percent of natural uranium. A problem that faced the developers of the atomic bomb was to find a process for increasing or "enriching" the number of U-235 atoms in natural prantom.

The process they finally settled on, and the one in use here, is called gaseous diffusion—wherein uranium is turned to gas and numbed through hundreds of metal barriers. These, in effect, filter out heavier, more common uranium atoms, leaving a gas highly enriched in U-235.

In the European method, a centrifuge whirls the uranium around, in the form of gas, at incredibly high speeds, heavier atoms that make up the bulk of natural uranium are thrown further from the center of the centrifuge than the lighter U-235 atoms, which remain in

Details of the new process are difficult to come by. In fact, Mr. Kantrowitz says that "this kind of process has never been talked about and nothing about it has appeared in the literature as far as we know."

But a spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) says that, judging by the few details it has been told about the process. "we looked over the and decided it didn't look

Mart Defies SEC On Membership

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (WP) .--The Philadelphia - Baltimore -Washington Stock Exchange has defied the Securities & Exchange Commission by refusing to bar mutual funds, insurance companies and other institutional investors from membership.

After a meeting of the P-B-W's board of governors yesterday, president Elkins Wetherill said the exchange has "seen no arguments that would convince us that our membership policy is not in the public interest."

If the exchange, the third largest of the regional exchanges, sticks to its position, it would set up a direct conflict with the SEC, which earlier this week said that membership on exchanges should be limited to firms that primarily serve the broad public Mr. Wetherill said he questioned whether the SEC has the power to force its decision on the exchange, "I have talked to some lawyers who tell me that they question the SEC's authority to force membership require-issues were clipped by large losses as heavy trading accelerated its pace. Volume rose to 33.46 miltion shares from 19.85 million

Bausch & Lomb dropped 10 to 178. Tool Research fell 7 3/4 to 49 1/4. It traded recently at a record price of 68.7/8—up from last year's low of 20—based on expectations of the company's role in space shuttle development.

Levitz gave up 3 7/8 to 126 1/4. This furniture concern, with its stock experiencing pressure because of several official investigations under way into its trading pattern, hit a peak of 159 1/4 several weeks ago.

The Dow Jones industrial aversee, shead by more than 8 points at 12:30 p.m., finished with an advance of 256 at 921.28, Dow's Best Level

This meant that the blue-chip indicator, despite its steadily lagging strength in afternoon trading managed to close at its best level in more than eight months. It posted its best finish since 923.06 on June 7.

The Dow scampered shead 1159 yesterday to close at 918.72, and today if charged above the 915-920 band that had contained unswings repeatedly since early last summer. The 1971 closing high of 950.82 came on April 28.

Some brokers labeled the market's action today as "self-correcting," implying that intermittent consolidations occur during a prolonged upswing.
Wheelabrator-Frye, the volume

leader, eased 1/8 to 8 3/8. The stock has been extremely active in recent sessions. Today, the company reported higher operating earnings for 1971. Tool Research, No. 3 in activity, was the active list's biggest point

Procter & Gamble, up 2 5/8 to 89 1/8, once again sold at its highest price ever. This blue chip has climbed 9 1/8 so far this

Du Pont, up 1 3/4 to 164 3/8, posted a 1971-72 high. This leading chemical company announced surprisingly good fourth-quarter results recently. But Eastman Kodak, a strong performer yes-terday, sank 3 3/8 to 105 in profit-taking.

Wells Rich Greene slipped Profits (millions).. 18.03 15.38 -2 7/8 to 23 3/4 and traded as low as 21 5/8. U.S. Upturn Is Continuing, FedBankSays

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP-DJ). -The acceleration of the economic recovery that occurred near the end of 1971 appears to have been carried into the new year. according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

However, the continued high personal savings rate and the rather sluggish retail sales picture indicate that consumers have not "overcome their hesitancy," the bank cautioned in its monthly bulletin issued today.

Partly auguring for continued economic momentum, the bank said, were the record levels of housing starts and building permits in December, which "increased the likelihood that the housing boom will continue into the opening months of the year." In addition, it said that recent surveys of corporate plans for plant and equipment spending this year "suggest that a strengthening of recently weak business invetment could emerge

On the other hand, it observed that automobile sales tailed off in December and that other retail sales also closed the year "on a somewhat weak note." quarter by a continued relatively high personal savings rate of 7.7 percent, it said. But the bank concluded the recent federal tax reductions should help bolster consumer demand.

A majority of experts would open the North hand with one closed hand with the spade queen and a trump lead to dummy's ten succeeded. The two high clubs no-trump. They would judge the diamond weakness for a no-trump were cashed, and a third club was bid a lesser evil than the rebid ruifed. West overruffed and led problems almost certain to arise his remaining spade. South won in his hand, finessed again in after an opening bid of one club.
This North player, however, chose the one-club bid and had trumps and reached this postto face a rebid problem when his

Rehids in clubs or no-trump would have been inappropriate, and the best alternative was no doubt a waiting bid of one spade. Such a three-card suit bid is relatively safe, and would have ended the bidding at a safe level. Against three hearts, West led the spade ten, South was then	NORTH	EAST 4 19 0 — 0 KJ 4 Q

South did not make the mistake of drawing the last trump. Instead he ruffed a club with his last trump and kept control: West could overruff if he pleased, but the declarer had three more tricks whether or not he did so. The contract was made.

DESIGN FOR THE REAL WORLD Human Ecology and Social Change By Victor Papanek, with an introduction by R. Buckminster Fuller. Pantheon. $5, pp. $8.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmand-Haupt

TERE is a book whose basic premise is so compelling, whose points are so dramatically entertainingly illustrated, and whose author's outrage is so infections, that a reviewer wants very much to recommend it without reservation. Reading "Design for the Real World," it is difficult to dispute Victor Papanek's contention that the profession of industrial design in this country is irresponsibly practiced, superfi-cially taught, insensitive to human needs, and as damning a reflection of what is wrong with Western industrial society as is the presence of aluminum beer cans in the biosphere. It is hard not to scrap one's TV set and dishwasher. It is tempting to sell all thou hast and follow Victor Papanek. Who could fall to be provoked by Mr. Papanek's contemptuous dismissal of all definitions of design from Horatio Greenough's to that of the German Bauhaus on the grounds that "the concept that what works well will of necessity look well has been the lame excuse for all the sterile. operating-room-like furniture and implements of the twenties and thirties"? Yet who could resist applanding his alternative, more complex definition of good design & "function comof good design (a "function com-plex" that takes into account such considerations as "method," "use," "need," "association," and "aes-thetics"), if only because it damns by definition such absurd items as the throwaway paper dress priced at $149.50 and "the ballpoint pen with fake polyethylene orchid surrounded by fake sty-rene carrot leaves sprouting out of its top"? Who would not be perturbed by Mr. Papanek's slapdash history of American industrial design, the key event of which he identifies as the Depression, when "ex-stage-designers" and "ex-window-dressers" like Harold Van Doren, Norman Bel Geddes, Raymond Loewy, Russel Wright, Henry Dreyfuss, Donald Deskey and Walter Dorwin Teague-were called in by industry simply to manipulate the superficial aspects of products so that they could be produced more cheaply and marketed through artificial sales pitches. Yet who would seriously dispute Mr. Papanek's conclusion that the American cornucopia does not pour out answers to the real needs of the whole world?

Who can think of the "Third World" and not be appalled by such examples of useless excess cited by Mr. Papanek as "Bachelor's Life-Size Inflatable Playgirls," "mink-covered toilet seats." "chrome-plated marmalade guards for toasts," "diapers for parakeets," (which sell at the rate of 20,000 a month), and "a $39.95 electronic clip-on gadget that mobile and flashes the message You're Welcome' when the electronic traffic light in a pay-ityourself highway tell booth lights up to say Thank You."? Mr. Papanek rivals Peter de Vries, the novelist, in his ability to nose out such absurdities (one expects at split-level chars and mentholated churches)

Who could fall to be impressed by the products designed by Mr. Papanek and his colleagues and students at the School of Design at the California Institute of the Arts products like candle-power. ed tin-can radios that cost only 9 cents apiece, special canes for the blind, low-cost educational Tro-sets "to be built by African in Africa, and pill dispensers dera-ed from the mechanical principle of the pea pod? And doesn't his plea for bionics, "the use of biological prototypes for the design of man-made synthetic systems," make irresistible good sense? Why then, with all these virtues to commend it, is Design for the Real World" finally so frustrating to read? Why does one have to force oneself to pay close attention to its arguments? Me Papanek is so obviously an imaginative revolutionary force in the field of design that his book ought to be an inspiration. Why is it

Is it perhaps his Jacobinite dis-approval of art—his unwillingness to concede even a pigeonhole to art for its own sake? Or his re-lentless tone of do-goodery? Or the introduction by R. Buck-minster Fuller, which almost never deviates from the subject of R. Buckminster Fuller and reads as if translated from bad German? Or is it the book's extremely sloppy design, most unfortunate for a work that puts such a high premium on elegance? No. These are incidental shortcomings and can be overlooked. But what is finally exasperating —what finally undermines the cogency of Mr. Papanek's text—is his failure to perceive that he has discovered little more than a symptom of what alls us, and his failure to suggest more than a superficial cure. It is all very well to go on and on about irresponsible designers and the needs of the real world, and it is all very edifying to witness the example of Mr. Papanek and his idealistic refusal to exploit our patent laws (so that some of his best designs have been "ripped off" and executed for the luxing market). But neither the repet. tion of shocking illustrations nor exhortations to improve are going to make much difference to system that demands the corruption of design. After all, Detroit's "cosmeticians" cannot be blamed for the American automobile industry; if they did not exist now, they would have to be reinvented.

Knowing this, one grows a little weary of Mr. Papanek's thetoric -of his dependence on phrases like "we must . . " and "we only have to . . " and other such abstractions in which it is never clear just exactly who "we" are are likely to change. Knowing this, one is inclined to feel synical. And knowing this, one is put in the disconcerting position of actually being numbed by Mr. Papanek's brainwaves.

West German Found Doped After Hockey

SAPPORO, Japan, Feb. 10 (Reuters) .- A doping row developed at the Winter Games today when the West German ice hockey captain, Alois Schloder, showed a positive reaction to a random dope test.

The International Ice Hockey Pederation called a meeting for tomorrow to decide what action to take against the player and posalbly his team."

The medical committee of the International Olympic Committee announced today that a dope test on a West-German player taken after the match against Yugoslavia on Monday had proved to be positive. It did not name the player or give details about the drug involved.

But the deputy leader of the West German national Olympic committee, Heiner Heose, said that the player was the 24-yearold Schloder and that the drug was ephedrine.

The hockey federation's president, John Abearne, refused to comment on the doping investiga-tion, but sources close to the federation said it had been agreed that no team would be disqualified if it was found that a player had breached the doping control rules.

West Germany has won all three of its matches in the group "B" tournament to decide 7th to 11th places in the tournament. The West Germans meet Japan in their-final game on Saturday. The medical committee said two West German players were tested after the Yogoslav game.

Long Training Time May Keep Miss Gould Out of Olympic Swim

BRISBANE, Feb. 10 (Reutera).—The father of Shane Gould, the 15-year-old Australian swimming star, threatened today to refuse to permit her to compete in the Olympic Games in Menich this summer

Miss Gould has broken all world freestyle records from 100 to 1,500 meters during the last year. But Ran Gould said that he would not allow her to go to the games if the Australian Swimming Union persisted with plans to keep the team together for 12 or 13 weeks before and during the games.

He said that he and his wife thought this would keep Shane away from home too long. She would miss her family life, her school work would be affected and she would be cut off from activities normal for a girl of her age, he said. Syd Grange, secretary of the Australian Swimming Union, said that it planned five weeks of training before the team

Marco Nixon and TV

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.-When President Nixon goes to China, he will take most of the American television industry with him. Harry Reasoner, Walter Cronkite, John Chancellor, Barbara Walters, Dan Rather, Herb Kaplow, Bernard Kalb, Eric Sevareid and many more. Thirty-five more by precise count, including cameramen and technicians.

Those of us who have to stay at Baker home will not be entirely bereft. The President is leaving Hogan's Heroes behind, and Lucy, and the old prints of "Casa... blanca." These should help most of us survive the intervals presumably few-when satellite transmission is not pulsing out of

There are a few people, however, who will be in trouble. All those people who are running for president, for example. What's the point of running in the U.S.A. if all the television is over in China?

China with the saga of Marco

The same question—"What's the use?"-confronts congress-men, people who blow up buildings, writers with new books to be flogged-everybody, in short, to whom television exposure is life's blood and mother's milk.

They will probably solve their problem by taking a vacation

Television is exceedingly presi-dential. It is at its best with bold, simple stories about strong men in familiar situations, and this is the kind of story the White House, of all American institutions, is most likely to provide consistently.

The President flying about the earth to engage in pageant diplomacy, like a Tudor king on a royal progress through the realm, provides the spectacle story which television reports incomparably. Presidents, of course, need television as much as television needs presidents. Television makes the politician's dream come true; with it, he can seize the voter directly by the ears, show him his smile, his gravity, the way flies away.

the muscle bunches with patriotic determination there under the iaw when he is really on his mettle, and all this right in the voter's living room, or bedroom, or cellar.

The press or "writing press," as it is now occasionally calleddeclines in importance to presidents as the common interest of presidency and television becomes more manifest

It seems unlikely, despite the occasional Agnewian assault on the columnists and publications of the wicked East, that anyone in the White House can care much about what goes on anymore in print. National triumph nowadays goes to the man who can dominate the fliuminated box Even voters who do read seem not to believe much they see in

For the present China trip the White House, nevertheless, allotted half the transportation space to the "writing press." In the future, we can probably anticipate that the percentage allotted to television will become progressively larger as television becomes increasingly presidential in its focus and the presidency becomes increasingly telegenic and theatri-

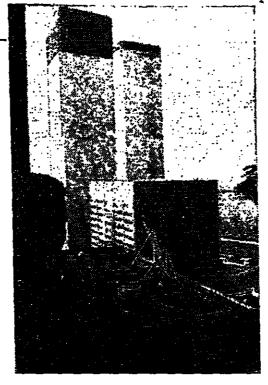

Is the printed page, then, to disappear? Probably not It has an important role to play in a possible reorganization of society which might result from the marriage of presidency and television. There will remain, after all, other parts of government requiring public attention—Con-gress, court, legislature, city hall, police station.

There will almost surely remain a minority who need to know what these institutions are up to. In time we might anticipate a great division—two nations living as one: one of them, living by television, would choose presidents; the other, still literate, would make most of the small decisions which determine how a country is actually run.

The worst is also possible, of course. This is that congressmen and judges and governors and mayors and cops will all give up when they see that nobody but a president can get on television. And then we will really have problems when the President

Those Swinging Manhattan Skyscrapers

By Deirdre Carmody

NEW YORK (NYT).—"Welcome to swinging Morgan Stanley." said the receptionist on the 48th floor of 140 Broadway. She meant it. Literally.

Beside her, a chandelier was visibly swinging from the celling as winds pounded the outside of the building. And across the street, a group of seemingly sober young executives stood on the 59th floor of 1 Chase Manhattan Plaza looking out of the window at the 140 Broadway building.

"It's swaying, there's no question it's swaying," said one i. "Line up the northwest corner of the building with the building behind it, and you can see it's swaying."

"Of course," he added, "we're swaying, too." He was probably right. Construction engineers say that when high winds, such as those with gusts up to 50 miles an hour a few days ago, batter against some skyscrapers, the build-ings sway, their chandellers swing and their structures creak and groan like a ship in heavy seas.

Ear to the Wall

"The first step is it sings," said a staff member of the Chase Manhattan Bank of her office at 1 Chase Manhattan Plaza. "Then it hums, Then when it's really moving, you put your ear to the wall at the center of the building and it really

The Empire State Building, which is 102 stories high, sways about a quarter of an inch in hurricane winds, according to Helmsley-Spear, Inc., which manages the building. Hurricane winds are 75 mph and higher.

There is a complicated formula that determines the maximum sway allowed in constructing a building. Engineers say that if all the conditions of the formula, which allows for 20 pounds of wind a square foot, were realized, buildings would only sway "a matter of inches."

However, since gusts hit only parts of a building at a time, it would be very unusual to equal the wind conditions allowed for the maximum sway of a building.

"In old times, they used brick walls and partitions," said Julian Karp, a structural engineer and a partner in the con-sulting engineering firm of Farkas, Barron & Partners, "But now they use light partitions of plaster board and buildings are less stiff than they used to be. Now the buildings are higher and the tallest buildings are built much lighter than in the

Elevators Malfunction

Another aspect of high wind, according to Mr. Karp, is that elevators do not function properly when a building sways and they are usually slowed down on very windy days. The day everyone talks about is Tuesday, Jan. 25, when gusts of wind were up to 63 mph, causing some buildings to throb with vibrations.

"You stood like this," said José Moreno, a waiter at the City Midday Club on the 51st floor of 140 Broadway, standing with his feet apart like a landlubber steadying himself on the deck of a rolling ship.

"And then you felt it easily," he said. "I felt dizzy, I remember," said Elias Romeos, another waiter, who has spent many years at sea.

François Le Guillon, a captain at the Wall Street Clubon the 58th floor of 1 Chase Manhattan, shook his head,

"That day the chandeliers were really swinging," he said. "That day I was feeling like I was a little drunk." Margaret Booth has worked in the Empire State Building for 18 years. She was asked if she had been aware of the sway of the building where she sells souvenirs at the observatory on the 86th floor.

"There's a sway," she said. "An imaginary sway."
